invites you to a breakfast presentation
at the RAND Corporation
Natural Gas and Israel's Energy Future

RAND has completed its first major project in Israel—a donor-funded study that evaluated strategies for using natural gas and addressed some of the larger questions related to managing risk, timing of investment in infrastructure, and diversifying Israel's future energy portfolio.

The principal investigators of the project will present research findings and recommendations and engage in a discussion with the audience about this and future opportunities for RAND to work in Israel on a variety of critical subjects.
